

Paul Axtell Continues to Shape Conversation

Center for Learning & Organizational Development

Over 2,000 OSU faculty and staff have completed Conversational Skills for Influencing Decisions that supports promotes conversational ideas introduced under the W.K. Kellogg Foundation-funded InterACTION! project. Though this project drew to a close in 2002, the Center for Learning & Organizational Development has sustained OSU's relationship with Paul Axtell, trainer, consultant and owner of Contextual Program Designs, who founded many of the ideas for which this work is based.

This training has been a key element in shaping the character of the University and helping faculty and staff in their personal development, maintaining relationships, managing and participating effectively in meetings, and handling upsets and problems

Free and open to OSU employees

Workshop will be announced when open for enrollment

hr.oregonstate.edu/training

