Welcome to a New Year! Today’s inspirational quotes are about new beginnings and possibilities:

“And now we welcome the new year, full of things that have never been”

— Rainer Maria Rilke

“sometimes you just know it’s time to start something new and trust the magic of new beginnings”

— Organize Zen

“If you're brave enough to say goodbye, life will reward you with a new hello.”

— Paulo Coelho
“To be hopeful, means to be uncertain about the future, to be tender toward possibilities, to be dedicated to change all the way down to the bottom of your heart.” – Rebecca Solnit

Welcome to a new week. Today’s inspirational Monday topic is being resilient in the face of uncertainty in the new year. Here are a few quotes and tips:

- Create sense of timelessness by spending time outdoors where there is no indication of what year it is.
- Think about the things that bring satisfaction and connection. Schedule a regular virtual visit with a human being each day to connect.
- Consider setting intentions instead of resolutions or goals so that you are living your life based on your values even if things change that you cannot control. As an example: Set an intention is to move 30 minutes a day away from a desk or computer. This can be accomplished even if the gym is closed due to COVID.

“Some stories don’t have a clear beginning, middle and end. Life is sometimes about having to change, taking the moment and making the best of it, without knowing what’s going to happen next... delicious ambiguity” – Gilda Radner

Good morning and welcome to a new week! Today’s inspiration is about goals and the idea of picking a goal for the year that is contained in a focus word or a “word of the year” for yourself for 2021. The word can set a tone for the year ahead and allow you to make decisions and choices that honor it. Attached is a list of ideas.

Keys to making the word real in your life include:

- Seeing it
- Reviewing it
- Thinking about it
- Feeling it,
- Experiencing it
- Owning it – as much as possible

Steps that can help this process include:

- Defining your focus word
- Compiling a reading list
- Choosing a song list that inspires you that contains the word
- Picking an affirmation with that word in it
- Creating a screen saver with the word
- Posting it in your “high traffic” areas in your workspace, your car, the bathroom mirror and the refrigerator

These ideas are from this website: https://thegoalchaser.com/how-to-make-your-word-of-the-year/

Quotes about goals to ponder today:

“You cannot change your destination overnight, but you can change your direction overnight.”
- Jim Rohn

“If you want to be happy, set a goal that commands your thoughts, liberates your energy and inspires your hopes.” - Andrew Carnegie

Thanks for all you do every day to help employees and students at OSU. Have a great week!

Welcome to a new week! Today’s inspiration is about thriving:

When you look up thrive in most dictionaries, the word flourish appears alongside it as simile. To thrive is not to find a point in your life where you are comfortable enough; where things are okay, or even great. Thriving is not a way-point on the map of personal development. It is the perpetual journey of growth — of expansion and adaptation — that allows you to venture further into a sense of authentic well-being. And this journey — this ability to thrive — can arise at any time in your life; at any point along your personal journey and regardless of the circumstances that currently surround you. But there is no judgement on how that will look in your world. There is no milestone that will mark your arrival into the realms of Those-Who-Thrive. There is simply an invitation — a gentle encouragement — for you to look at your life as it stands, right now, and ask yourself:

- Where am I not prospering? What areas of my life are no longer conducive for growth?
- What opinions do I hold about myself that are preventing me from stepping into greater wellness and joy?
- What changes can I make to the way I live my life that will afford me more freedom and contentment?

And then take action on any of these factors and plant a new seed of potential in your life. You are an exquisite, unique and precious living being and you deserve to thrive. And that process can begin today wherever — and whoever — you are in your life right now. All that is required is for you to forget any idea of what you think “thrive” should look like and allow yourself to boldly, gently and continually grow into a healthier, happier and more expansive version of who you used to be. This information comes from an article by Kim Forester that is located here.

We hope you have a wonderful week and find ways to thrive!

GREAT TRUTHS THAT LITTLE CHILDREN HAVE LEARNED AND SHARED:

1. No matter how hard you try, you can't baptize cats.
2. When your Mom is mad at your Dad, don't let her brush your hair.
3. If your sister hits you, don't hit her back. They always catch the second person.
4. Never ask your 3-year old brother to hold a tomato.
5. You can't trust dogs to watch your food.
6. Don't sneeze when someone is cutting your hair.
7. Never hold a Dust-Buster and a cat at the same time.
8. You can't hide a piece of broccoli in a glass of milk.
9. Don't wear polka-dot underwear under white shorts.

I hope you find this interesting and helpful:

10 Steps to Savoring the Good Things in Life (by Fred Bryant, a social psychologist at Loyola University Chicago. Information from an article BY STACEY KENNELLY | JULY 23, 2012 – FIND IT HERE)

1. Share your good feelings with others.

“What’s the first thing you do when you get good news?” Bryant says. “You go and tell someone that’s important to you, like a spouse or a friend.”

He suggests that we treat positive events just like positive news. Tell another person when you are feeling particularly appreciative of a certain moment, whether it be a laugh with friends or a scene in nature. Studies about the ways people react to positive events have shown that those who share positive feelings with others are happier overall than those who do not.

2. Take a mental photograph.

Pause for a moment and consciously be aware of things you want to remember later, such as the sound of a loved one’s chuckle, or a touching moment between two family members. “It’s about saying to yourself, ‘This is great. I’m loving it,’” says Bryant.

3. Congratulate yourself.

Don’t hesitate to pat yourself on the back and take credit for your hard work, Bryant says. Research shows that people who revel in their successes are more likely to enjoy the outcome.

4. Sharpen your sensory perceptions.
Getting in touch with your senses—or taking the time to use them more consciously—also flexes savoring muscles. “Take the time to shut out your other senses and hone in on one,” she says. “Take the time to sniff the food, smell the food. Or close your eyes while you’re taking a sip of a really nice wine.”

5. Shout it from the rooftops.

Laugh out loud, jump up and down, and shout for joy when something good happens to you, Bryant says. People who outwardly express their good feelings tend to feel extra good, because it provides the mind with evidence that something positive has occurred.

6. Compare the outcome to something worse.

Boost positive feelings by reminding yourself of how bad things could be, Bryant suggests. For example, if you are late to work, remind yourself of those who may not have a job at all. Comparing good experiences with unpleasant ones gives us a reference point and makes our current situation seem better, he says.

7. Get absorbed in the moment.

Try to turn off your conscious thoughts and absorb positive feelings during a special moment, such as taking in a work of art. Studies of positive experiences indicate that people most enjoy themselves when they are totally absorbed in a task or moment, losing their sense of time and place—a state that psychologists call “flow.”

8. Count your blessings and give thanks.

Tell your loved ones how lucky you feel to have them, Bryant suggests, or take extra time to appreciate your food before a meal. Research suggests that saying “thank you” out loud can make us happier by affirming our positive feelings. Bryant also suggests thinking of a new blessing for which you’ve never given thanks each night in bed. Recalling the experience through thanks will help you to savor it.

9. Avoid killjoy thinking.

Avoiding negative thinking is just as important as thinking positively, Bryant says. After a rough day, try not to focus on the negative things that occurred. Studies show that the more negative thoughts people have after a personal achievement, the less likely they are to enjoy it. “People who savor the positive sides to every situation are happier at the end of the day,” he says.

10. Remind yourself of how quickly time flies.
Remember that good moments pass quickly, and tell yourself to consciously relish the moment, Bryant says. Realizing how short-lived certain moments are and wishing they could last longer encourages you to enjoy them while they’re happening. In fact, savoring can be used to connect you to the past or future, argues Bryant. This can be done by remembering a good time and recreating it, or imagining a time in the future when you will look back with good memories.

Thank you for all that you do!

Good Morning and welcome to a new week! Here are some inspiring quotes for the day regarding the power of kindness:

“I think probably kindness is my number one attribute in a human being. I’ll put it before any of the things like courage, or bravery, or generosity, or anything else... Kindness—that simple word. To be kind—it covers everything, to my mind. If you’re kind that’s it.” — Roald Dahl

Today’s inspirational thoughts are about gratitude.

"The world has enough beautiful mountains and meadows, spectacular skies and serene lakes. It has enough lush forests, flowered fields, and sandy beaches. It has plenty of stars and the promise of a new sunrise and sunset every day. What the world needs more of is people to appreciate and enjoy it." Michael Josephson

"The deepest craving of human nature is the need to be appreciated." William James

"Be thankful for what you have; you'll end up having more. If you concentrate on what you don't have, you will never, ever have enough." Oprah Winfrey

The real gift of gratitude is that the more grateful you are, the more present you become.

Today’s inspirational Monday quotes are about persistence in adversity. At first that does not sound very inspirational but consider that what we learn from struggle or defeat often fuels our victories in the future.

“Never confuse a single defeat with a final defeat.” - F. Scott Fitzgerald, American author

"It's not whether you get knocked down, it's whether you get up." - Vince Lombardi – NFL Coach and Executive

“Success is not final, failure is not fatal: It is the courage to continue that counts.” - Winston Churchill, former Prime Minister of the United Kingdom

Good morning and happy Monday! Today’s inspirational quotes are about education:

“Let us think of education as the means of developing our greatest abilities, because in each of us there is a private hope and dream which, fulfilled, can be translated into benefit for everyone and greater strength for our nation.” - John F. Kennedy, 35th President of the United States

“The function of education is to teach one to think intensively and to think critically. Intelligence plus character – that is the goal of true education.” – Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

“Education is the ability to listen to almost anything without losing your temper or your self-confidence.” – Robert Frost.

“Education in the most powerful weapon which you can use to change the world.” – Nelson Mandela.

Good Morning and Happy Monday! Here is an inspirational quote to consider about the situations in life that don’t turn out exactly like we planned:

“As I look back on my life, I realize that every time I thought I was being rejected from something good, I was actually being redirected to something better.” -Dr. Steve Maraboli, speaker and author

Another bit of inspiration for your week is this quote borrowed from the CUPA HR conference presentation on Resiliency:

The workshop presenter encouraged participants to find their “why”. In other words what values do you hold that help you decide it is worth it to persevere through challenges and uncertainty?

For example, maybe it is your desire to help others, your faith, hope or your dreams for our world. Spending time thinking about the “why” can give meaning and perspective in uncertainty.

Welcome to a new week! Today’s inspirational quotes are about self-care:

“Talk to yourself like you would to someone you love.” - Brené Brown

“Almost everything will work again if you unplug it for a few minutes, including you.” - Anne Lamott

“When you recover or discover something that nourishes your soul and brings joy, care enough about yourself to make room for it in your life.” - Jean Shinoda Bolen

“A healthy self-love means we have no compulsion to justify to ourselves or others why we take vacations, why we sleep late, why we buy new shoes, why we spoil ourselves from time to time. We feel comfortable doing things which add quality and beauty to life.” - Andrew Matthews

Self-care refers to activities and practices that can help you to reduce your stress and enhance your overall well-being: essentially, proactively taking care of yourself. Self-care is more than an occasional treat, but a way of living each day that incorporates practices and behaviors that help you feel refreshed, re-energized, and rested. Everyone deals with stress differently, and everyone’s preference for practicing self-care is different as well. Here is the key: Add it to your calendar or to do list. Block off time in your day to practice self-care. You are worth it!

Examples of self-care activities:

- Sleep
- Exercise
- Yoga
- Being out in nature
- Practicing self-compassion
- Being with people you love
- Practicing Gratitude
- Journaling
- Unplugging from Technology
- Doing something you love

Good Morning and Happy Monday! Today’s inspirational quotes are about balance:

Life is a balance between what we can control and what we cannot. I am learning to live between effort and surrender.

Some days you eat salads and go to the gym, some days you eat cupcakes and refuse to put on pants. It's called balance.

Thank you for all you do to help employees and students at OSU. We wish you a week of balance and at least one cupcake!

Welcome to a new week! Today’s inspirational thoughts are about joy. May you find some joy in your day and in the week ahead!

“Joy is increased by spreading it to others.” - Robert Murray McCheyne

“Sometimes your joy is the source of your smile, but sometimes your smile can be the source of your joy.” – Thich Nhat Hanh

“There are souls in this world who have the gift of finding joy everywhere, and leaving it behind them when they go.” - Frederick William Faber

“The essence of life is not in the great victories and grand failures, but in the simple joys.” – Jonathan Lockwood Huie
Thank you for the ways you spread joy in your work with OSU employees and students! Have a great week.

Welcome to a new week! Today’s inspirational quotes are about peace.

“Do not let the behavior of others destroy your inner peace.” —Dalai Lama

"Peace can become a lens through which you see the world. Be it. Live it. Radiate it out. Peace is an inside job." —Wayne Dyer
If you are interested in a webinar about peace in relationships in 2021 there is a free webinar available from Vital Smarts (who facilitates Crucial Conversations) at this link called a Path to Peace in 2021.

Looking for a feel good Christmas movie? Check on Operation Christmas Drop on Netflix. It is based on a real life humanitarian impact project that the US military carries out in the Pacific Islands during Christmas.

Wishing you a peaceful week and happy winter holidays!
